

City Hardship Assistance Program (CHAP)

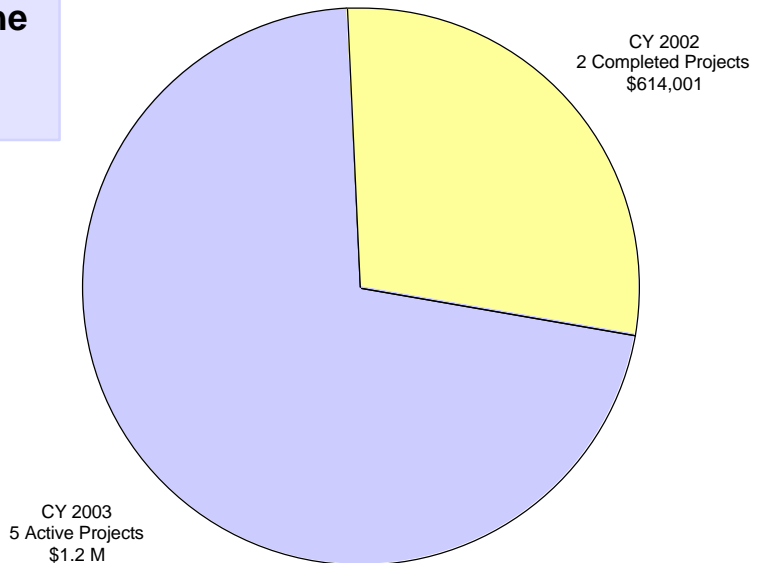

State funds for projects to offset extraordinary costs associated with the transfer of state highways to small cities.

The City Hardship Assistance Program was created by the 1991 Legislature to provide state funding to offset extraordinary costs associated with the transfer of state highways to cities. The CHAP program is on an annual cycle with project applications due in September and selected in November.

How the City Hardship Assistance Program works:

- An eligible agency is a city or town that has a population less than twenty thousand and has received jurisdictional responsibility for a former state route.
- Distributed through a competitive project selection process.
- Projects are selected based on structural condition, accident experience, and relationship to other local agency projects.
- Cities are reimbursed for the entire project cost.
